“ I don't have a single memory to share - but more of a kaleidoscope of images of Wayne's smiling face. I don't think I ever encountered him without that big, sunny smile. I can still hear him call my daughter "Miss Natalie ", and talk to her about being an "artiste". I see that smiling face have a conversation with my son, who as a young teen looked up to him so much. He had a knack for making even the simplest times fun. Cheerful, friendly, a good friend. He stood apart because he was uniquely, qualified to be a positive force in life. Our hearts mourn the loss - that contagious good humor and smile hidden from our view. But we take some comfort in knowing that Wayne is sharing that smile with those who have gone ahead of us. Smiling for Jesus. Waiting for reunion. We will see that smile again. And in so doing, our hearts will be full.
