“ Kim and Kristie, my heart absolutely aches for you both. I am so, so sorry about your dad. Honestly, I don't think I have a single childhood memory that the four of you didn't somehow help create—or nearly get me in trouble for. From sitting on the roof watching prisoners escape (like we had any business being up there but the prison sure did appreciate the heads up), to riding horses, getting bitten by Mister, being launched off Tempest like a rocket - breaking more legs than we could count, to blasting the record player and singing into hairbrushes like we were the next big thing. And let's be real... I may never have married Randy Owen from Alabama like I fully expected to at age 10, but I did get a lifetime of laughs out of thinking I would. What gives me the tiniest bit of comfort today is imagining Aunt Deb up there flirting with Elvis, and your dad finally getting to reunite with her—and probably shaking his head at whatever trouble the two of them are already getting into together. If heaven wasn't ready for them before, it sure is now. Even though I can't physically be there today, I am with you in every way that matters—in love, in tears, in memories, and in spirit. I'm holding you both so close in my heart.

I have known Kerry for years. He and my first husband went to school at Saks together years ago. We all kind of lost touch but Kerry was a good guy.
