Drek was the life of the party. He was the light in a dark room and was always willing to help anybody with advice or if they just needed a friend, he was there. He enjoyed playing his game and spending time with his boys. Drek loved everybody and treated everyone with respect and vise versa. He loved his nieces, nephews, and his mom. He will be dearly missed and loved forever by those who love him the most. Long Live The King.

The strength of a warrior, the heart of a King. To keep you here with us we'd give anything. The world didn't just shake, it turned upside down. To fathom the reality of how, you left without a sound. No warning signs, or cries for help, just humble Drek upon his throne. God had plans to send his angels to bring this Legend back home. If we would have only known we would've held on a little tighter. To every joke, smile, quick comeback, every moment that transpired. I sit here and daydream from the moment we met to my very last goodbye. The warmth in your smile, and the joyous twinkle in your kind gentle eyes. These moments, memories, and feelings we will hold on to forever. Under lock and key in heart and mind always to be remembered. For now we go on, learning day by day how to exist with you in Heaven. We will try our best most days. We know that's what you want, but no guarantees next 11-11 the biggest solace is knowing you're not alone, cracking jokes with your dad, Trent, and Fat. Your soul is at ease, no pain, no stress, just light, love, and eternal peace at last. One fact I know, we will all be together on God's time one sweet day and with that fact we will soldier on for you, loving you forever and always.
