He is preceded in death by his father, William Santivasci Sr.; grandparents, Robert and Sarah Baxter, Angelina and Innocenzo Santivasci.

Billy loved fishing, NASCAR, and spending time with his children. He was a skilled commercial roofer who worked hard to provide for his family. While he took pride in his work and enjoyed life's simple pleasures, nothing meant more to him than being a father.

Above all else, Billy's greatest pride and purpose in life was his children, especially his son, Riley, who was truly the center of his world. Billy shared a special bond with Riley and devoted his life to loving, guiding, and supporting him. He cherished every moment they spent together and was incredibly proud to be Riley's dad. Anyone who knew Billy knew how deeply he loved his son and how much joy Riley brought into his life.

Though Billy's time here was far too short, the love he gave his son Riley—will live on forever. His strength, guidance, and the memories they shared will remain in Riley's heart for the rest of his life. Billy will be deeply loved and dearly missed by all who knew him.

OMG...your description of your brother in this post is exactly how I remember your brother. I had a study hall with him (when I was in JH) and he was just that...funny, in trouble, and basically told you how it was. I'm so sorry for your family's loss.

“ Billy was Rileys whole world. It was just the 2 of them. Riley didn't really have a Mom. Billy and Riley did everything together. Billy was so protective of him. I guess he was more concerned about Riley than his own health. That is too bad. Now Riley just has memories. He wants to hear stories about his dad so if anyone has stories, pics or videos we would really appreciate it for Riley. They loved to fish, motorcross, nascar and hanging out together.

*He wasn't always easy. He struggled & made choices that led him down hard roads. However, there were flashes of kindness, times when he showed a side of himself that didn't fit the story some people expected of him. Over the years, some have stopped to tell me ab the kindness they received from him. One experience was when someone flipped their car on its side in a ditch. He pulled them from the car and stayed with them until medics arrived. Another flash of kindness I heard about was when he ran to the aide of a motorcyclist just after an accident. The motorcyclist swore he owed Billy his life. Even in a life marked by mistakes, there are still moments of humanity that matter. He taught us that people aren't just one thing. That someone can be a troublemaker and still be kind; and with a measure of grace, some understanding that he was human.
May he have eternal peace.*

Chris I'm sorry ur family is going through these tough times. Billy was a good person. I remember the first time I had met him and Harold at a football game. I also remember the very last time I seen him, I had a drink with him at AJs about 15 years ago.

When my brother got hit in a hit and run car accident, he was the one who came back to the car and took me to the ER. I only went with him because I knew him from school and he was always very kind.

Sorry to hear of his passing. Prayers for you and everyone who loved him.
